Depositions in the suit for $45,000 damages brought by Rev. Charles L. Janzow of the Evangelical Lutheran Bethlehem Church against 18 members of his congregation will be taken tomorrow, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. in the law office of Attorney William F. Smith, room 421 Lucas building, services having been secured by the sheriff on all the defendants.

The case is assigned to the October term. A church meeting has been called for the defendants for Monday evening, Sept. 19. Attorney Smith, in speaking for his client Saturday morning, stated that the suit had been under the statutes covering trespass on the case, based on continuous and malicious tort, which simplified permits action for "conspiracy to defame."

"The troublesome element in the church," stated Mr. Smith, "which constituted about two percent of its membership, deposed two pastors in years gone by, and they now seek on trivial charges to oust Rev. Janzow. I have included the charges in the petition merely to show the public how trivial they are. Rev. Janzow has been hampered at every turn by these dissident members who have placed at their head a man of wealth, 77 years old, merely to give the movement tone. I believe the atmosphere will be cleared by this bolt in their camp."

Dr. Janzow discusses his suit freely. "Christians do not go to court," he tauntingly when it became known that he might sue in the courts, "remarked the Rev. Janzow in discussing his damage suit, 'and I will confess the peculiar position in which I, as pastor, a minister of the gospel, was placed had a great deal to do with my delay in forcing the issue. But conditions after six years of pestiferous nagging have become such that I felt justified in forcing the men I have sued into a corner."

Leads Back to Two Causes.

"I attribute the strife, which from now on must perforce be conducted open and above board, to two causes. They may appear as trivial to an outsider, and perhaps they are, but they have been big enough to occupy the entire time of some of the dissidents for many quiet little meetings in back parlors. I have taught the children of the parish the English language. I have endeavored to teach them, and used it in the Sunday school. The second point involves the Frederick Schwartz failure several years ago, when a well-known grain merchant, an elder in our church failed and lost thousands of dollars belonging to men who at my solicitation had come to his assistance when he first showed signs of distress."

"It is from these two things that motives have assumed the magnitude of mountains. Some German-born Americans, though they bear the citizen papers of the United States, hate to give up the language of the fatherland. They use it at every possible chance in their own homes, and resist any attempt to teach anything else in the church."

"I have always believed that a child in

"LITTLE MOTHER"
FATALLY BURNEDChild Was Preparing Evening Meal
for Parent When Her Clothes Ignited.

While preparing supper for her mother, who works away from home as a seamstress to support her three little children, Liddy Bandy, aged 12, of 719 South Second street, nearly burned to death Friday night.
Starting a fire in a stove by the aid of a paper lighted by a lamp, the little girl's clothes caught fire and she ran screaming from one room to another in a frantic effort to extinguish the flames.
Her little sisters, Mabel and Guselle, aged 7 and 6, respectively, ran for neighbors, but before assistance could be rendered to the little housekeeper she was fatally burned.
When the mother, who is Mrs. Mary Aschcroft, returned from her work at 7 o'clock she found no supper waiting for her as usual, but instead she hurried to the City Hospital, where her child was near death.
"I wanted to fix your supper, mamma," the child whispered. Physicians say there is very little chance for recovery.

ALLEGED HIGHWAYMAN CAUGHT

Charles Derose, whose home is near the National stockyards in East St. Louis, is in jail at the Four Courts on a charge of highway robbery.
Samuel Rosenblum of 1215 Ohio avenue reported to the police at 10:30 o'clock Friday night that he had been stopped at Twelfth and Linden streets and robbed of $55 and two rings.
Police arrested Derose at 1311 Linden street. Two rings and $51 were found in his pockets, according to the police. Rosenblum is said to have identified the rings.

GRANDDAUGHTER OF MULLANPHY DIESMrs. Helen I. Clements, Earnest
Church Worker, Found Dead
in Bed by Daughter.

Mrs. Helen I. Clements, aged 60, widow of the late Dr. James W. Clements and granddaughter of John Mullanphy, millionaire philanthropist, was found dead in bed at her home, 2649 Laclede avenue early Saturday morning.
Mrs. Clements had habitually risen to attend early mass at St. Francis Xavier's church, but this morning when her daughter, Miss Mary Clements, called her, she received no response, and going to her bed she was shocked to find her mother cold in death.
Dr. Ellsworth Smith and Dr. Jas. R. Clements, the latter a relative of the family, were called and declared heart disease the cause of death.
Mrs. Clements was an active church worker, and was one of twenty parishioners to give $500 for the building of St. Francis Xavier's church. She was an active member of the Mary and Martha, the Queen of Angels, Purgatorial, Children of Mary, Altar and Church Building Society of St. Francis Xavier's and aided in many charities.
A mass meeting of W. C. T. U. members has been called for Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by Mrs. M. E. Otto, head of the society, for the purpose of raising money to help Mrs. Prindell, who is in St. Louis, to hear "Mother" Prindell of New York, the famous rescue worker.
Mrs. Prindell is accompanied by Miss Jennie Smith, rescue worker and railroad evangelist, who will also speak. The meeting will be held in the Union mission tent, Jefferson avenue and Locust street.

Head of Treasury Department Addresses Members of Merchants' Exchange on Political and Financial Topics, Emphasizing Western Trade Demands.

SPEAKS IN FESTIVAL HALL
AT WORLD'S FAIR TONIGHT

Victory for Republican Party Is Predicted by the Man Who May Be Candidate for the Presidential Nomination Four Years Hence.

Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, mentioned as a probable candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1908, is in St. Louis.

Tonight Mr. Shaw will address a mass meeting of Republicans in Festival Hall at the World's Fair.

Discussing political conditions, Mr. Shaw said he had no doubt that the Republican ticket would be successful in the coming election.

"No good reason has been advanced why the Republican party should not be retained in power," he said. "No good reason can be advanced. The people are prosperous, and that tells the story of the success of the Roosevelt administration."

"I expect to see the Republicans win by a larger majority than four years ago." At the Festival Hall meeting, in addition to Mr. Shaw, speeches will be delivered by Cyrus P. Washburn, gubernatorial nominee, and H. S. Hadley, Republican candidate for attorney-general of Missouri.

"Near Possibility."

Secretary Shaw addressed the members of the Merchants' Exchange at noon. He praised the Roosevelt administration, mentioning the Panama canal as certain to work wonders for American commerce.

"Deep water from St. Louis to the Gulf was declared to be a 'near probability.'"

"The financial sky is clear," said Mr. Shaw. "A happy medium has been reached between the optimism which expresses itself in plunging and the pessimism which is a result of the loss of the Philippines policy."

In praising the administration's Philippine policy, he said that 80 per cent of the trade of the Pacific world in future belong to the United States, and particularly to the West.

Secretary Shaw arrived in St. Louis at 8 o'clock, and he will visit some of the clubs of the city.

He was met at Union Station by a committee of the Hamilton Club, composed of A. L. Shapell, Thomas J. Atkins, Judge Selden P. Spencer, President C. D. DeLoach, and Congressman Charles F. Johnson.

During the afternoon he went to the Woods Fair. He will visit some of the buildings before speaking Saturday night.

DEAD WITH COAT AS PILLOW

Body of Man 55 Years Old Found in Car at Wright Street.

The body of a man about 55 years old was found this afternoon in a Burlington freight car near the foot of Wright street by a section hand.

The man's head was resting on his folded coat, and it is thought he died while asleep in the car Friday night. He wore two pairs of overalls, was 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighed 160 pounds, and had brown hair, brown mustache and a "joddy" growth of beard.

Dispersal prescriptions of recent date were found in his pocket, but there was no other mark of identification. The body was taken to the morgue.

Blood Poisoning and Lost
Use of Arm.

"Good-by, mother. You'll not see me any more. I'm not coming back home."

With this farewell on her lips Mrs. Augustus Blay, 23 years old, left her mother at their home, 2614 North Twenty-second street, and a few hours later was found lying unconscious on the sidewalk at Seventeenth and Olive streets, having inhaled chloroform in an attempt to end her life.

Intense suffering and the loss of the use of her right arm caused the woman to become melancholy. Three months ago she scratched her wrist with a pin.

Blood poisoning set in and her life was despaired of. When she recovered her arm became useless.

Mrs. Blay brooded over her suffering and frequently told her mother that she could endure it no longer.

Buying a bottle of chloroform she boarded a car and inhaled the fumes.

When she left the car, almost fainting, at Jefferson avenue and Olive street, she walked east on Olive street still inhaling the chloroform. She fell unconscious at the corner of Seventeenth street, within two blocks of the City Hospital.

She will recover, but she says that her suffering from her arm is so great that she will kill herself the first opportunity.

Mrs. Blay is a widow and lived with her aged mother.

YOUNG WOMAN TAKES MORPHINE ON A CAR.

Ida Huston, a pretty girl 18 years old, living at 1219 South Thirteenth street, attempted suicide Saturday morning by swallowing morphine tablets while drinking a glass of beer at Burke's saloon, Seventeenth and Chestnut streets.

The girl left her home early Saturday morning and went to Burke's saloon, where she was seen by a waiter.

She purchased some morphine tablets at a downtown drug store, and getting into a street car at Market and Seventh streets, she swallowed one of the tablets.

Before drinking the beer she swallowed another tablet.

The third tablet she swallowed after the beer and a smile on her face the girl fell back unconscious. She was taken to the City Hospital and will recover.

It is a feeling of despondency and the reasons the girl gives for wishing to end her life. Her mother runs a boarding house.

CONTINUED FAIR BUT COOLER

Sunday Afternoon May Be Cool
Enough to Bring Out Your
"Prince Alec."

"De-light-ful," as the President would say, is the state of St. Louis weather. Never was September filled with so many fair, balmy days. If it continues the Igorrotes may well remain a while longer. A cool wind that may be the harbinger of something unforeseen, will strike St. Louis Sunday afternoon.

The official forecast: "Fair tonight and Sunday; cooler Sunday afternoon; fresh southerly winds, shifting to northerly Sunday."

All east of the city the autumn warmth prevails and only in the upper lake regions is there any indication that winter is advancing. Elsewhere it is fair.

Just last night in all parts of the country was very light. In St. Louis it being barely perceptible. West of the Rocky mountains in the Northwestern states a heavy pressure exists.

Returning home from a trip to the sea shore for the summer, J. G. McNair, of 2848 West Pine boulevard discovered that his residence had been entered by robbers and $200 worth of clothes, jewelry and other goods taken.

The robbery was reported to the police Saturday. Mr. McNair states that he left St. Louis July 10. When he returned the windows and doors of the house were barred and everything appeared as the family had left it, with the exception of a screen over a window leading to the basement.

This showed signs of having been pulled off and nailed back again, and the police believe entrance to the house was gained in this manner.

After ransacking the house and taking many articles of value, including clothing, jewelry, a gold box, opera fans, and a gold-mounted briar pipe, the robbers are supposed to have left the house by the front door, springing the lock after them.

ONE KILLED IN AUTO WRECK ON MOONLIT ROAD

Chauffeur Loses Life and Three Companions Are Injured by Plunge Over Embankment While Speeding Along Manchester Road.

OWNERS NOT AWARE
AUTOS WERE TAKEN

Report That Miss Lily Lambert, Who Owned One of the Machines, Was in the Wreck, Caused Her Friends Much Alarm.

Racing along moonlit Manchester road, near Ballwin, St. Louis County, at 12:30 o'clock this morning, a merry automobile party of four plunged over the edge of a steep declivity to the rock bed of a creek.

John Curran, recently of New York, a chauffeur in the employ of Miss Lily Lambert of 10 Hortense place, was crushed under the heavy machine and almost instantly killed.

Miss Lily Marquits of 1184 North Leander avenue received dangerous injuries. Miss Nellie Marquits, her sister, and Edward Parkhurst, son of a Ballwin dentist, were less seriously injured.

With another automobile party, also of four members, the four had left the city early in the evening.

The other party of four consisted of Bart Laval and Fred Laub and Misses Theodore Marney and Margaret Reeder, cousins.

Both machines were taken out by the chauffeurs without consulting the owners it appears.

The party passed through Ballwin, going west about 11 o'clock. They went several miles farther into the country, then turned and started back toward the city.

LIGHTS EXTINGUISHED.

According to the statement of Parkhurst, the lights of the machine driven by Curran went out on the steep declivity, but the absence of the lights does not seem to have caused Curran to be more careful.

It was in front of the other party and was setting a lively pace. There were snatches of song and merry laughter as the big automobile, a 1900 machine from France, sped over the smooth road.

A quarter of a mile west of Ballwin, Frank Ruwe, a farmer of Sherman, Mo., was driving slowly along the road with a load of apples on his way to the St. Louis market.

He heard the automobile coming behind him and turned out of the road and stopped to give it a chance to pass.

His wagon had just crossed a culvert, and on one side of the road there was an almost sheer descent of thirty feet.

Curran probably did not see the dark outlines of the wagon until he was close to it. Fearing a collision, he turned sharply out of the road, not noticing how near the edge of the bank he was.

The wheels went over the edge, and the automobile went plunging and sliding to the bottom of the declivity.

In its descent it turned completely over. Curran was caught under it and his head was crushed. The others were held under the machine.

Ruwe ran to the spot, but could do nothing unaided. He heard the other automobile approaching and climbed up to the roadway and stopped it and told the occupants what had happened.

The young women and Parkhurst were rescued with little difficulty and placed in the second automobile and taken with all speed to Ballwin, where they were attended at the residence of Dr. W. M. Clark by Drs. Clark and Dr. Meisch.

INJURIES SOON FATAL.

Dr. Zepren of Ballwin went to the scene of the accident and did what he could for Curran, who died soon after being taken from under the machine.

His body was left on the spot in Dr. Zepren's care until Coroner Oberlin Koch of Des Perre arrived and held an inquest.

The injured were cared for during the day at the Clark residence. Miss Lily Marquits' spine was injured and she received internal injuries. Her sister escaped with cuts about her head and eyes. Parkhurst's head was cut and his spine injured.

The address given by Miss Marney and Miss Reeder is 1041 Leffingwell avenue.

The second machine belongs to Humphrey Fullerton of 624 Olive street.

MISS LAMBERT'S AUTO.

When the first news of the automobile accident was received in St. Louis, there was considerable alarm in the West End among the friends of Miss Lily Lambert, it being understood that the automobile was Miss Lambert's, and her friends having but meager information as to who was in the machine when the accident occurred.

Miss Lambert was found at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lambert, 1011 North Main street, at 10 Hortense place, and made this statement to the Post-Dispatch:

"My automobile was taken out last night without my knowledge or consent. My

Teaching the Husband His Place.

By Nikola Greeley-Smith, Granddaughter of Horace Greeley.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

The housewives of Holyoke, Mass., according to a dispatch from that progressive town, have organized a club, one of the main purposes of which is "to train husbands to know their places." Assuredly, a praiseworthy object, particularly when we are told by the club members that the husband's proper place is in his own home. There is nothing revolutionary about this theory, which has been held by every wife since Eve. But the organized effort to impress the widely point of view upon husbands seems to lead the way to better things.

The difficulties of keeping a husband at home are never thoroughly understood by a wife so long as she confines her study of the subject to her own fireside. For, of course, Mrs. Brown knows that beauty, wit and charm combine in her household to keep unappreciative Mr. Brown from political and lodge meetings. It is only when she casts her critical eye at the Jones household across the way that she is able to get the faintest inkling of the husband's side of the case. Then she is apt to ask herself, not what reason Jones has for staying away, but what he could possibly have for going home.

I met the other day a young bride, rather pretty in a calm, bovine sort of way, who had already begun to talk of what she would do to her horrible creature who ever tried to take her husband away from her. Beyond a certain evanescent prettiness and the air of massive and dignified stupidity that some dull women have, there was absolutely nothing to her. And I couldn't help asking myself, how I would like to spend even one evening a week in her society and shrinking from the picture of dreary sameness the idea presented. Another young woman, who, after three months of wedded woe, had been obliged to seek solace in the divorce courts, seriously attributed her matrimonial failure to the fact that she was not of the somewhat Turkish type of beauty that she believed the masculine ideal called for, and now squanders her meagre alimony on flesh foods and complexion creams, in the hope of becoming more pleasing.

The real reason of her matrimonial shipwreck no one who knew her 10 minutes could fail to fathom. In every word and gesture she was utterly, hopelessly artificial. And there is nothing so wearing in family relations as artificiality.

To be most natural is to be most pleasing to the majority of men, and any woman who undertakes to put into practice any so-called system of "winning a man," holding a husband's love, "training him," etc., is in a fair way to make a nuisance of herself and altogether to defeat her object.

To be natural and sweet-tempered and sensible and as pretty as you know how is the only way to train a husband. It doesn't always work, of course, for there are husbands absolutely unamenable to training of any kind.

This does not imply that it is necessary to be a "doormat" wife, by any means, but just simply that you must realize that no amount of ceremonies on earth gives any human being any sovereignty over another's right to solitude or to society other than years.

Any one who has ever felt the awful feeling of oppression, the unreasonable but intense desire to get away that results from an enforced prolonged companionship, will understand the married man's occasional distaste, for even the most congenial bedside.

Even in the more firmly rooted relations of parents and children, brothers and sisters, there are similar moments of longing to get away from the accustomed rut and all the persons and things that appertain to it, a wanderlust of mind that no amount of training can eradicate. And its occasional manifestations in the best husbands it will take more than the ablest woman's club to quell.

Moving the Russian Army.

A Russian military train for troop transport east of Baku consists of 25 to 30 carriages, trucks, or vans, each carrying nominally 50 men, reduced in practice to 25 or 30. Approximately a single train can carry alternatively 700 infantry, or 200 horses and their riders, or half a battery of artillery, in each case, with a small proportion of regimental transport. As a Russian army corps of the western pattern, fully mobilized and inclusive of its cavalry division numbers 41,000 men with 121 guns, 317 carriages and 1700 horses, it follows that some 20 trains would be required to transport the army corps, and that at the rate of six trains a day, it would take over 44 days to pass a given point.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel. Paris had just stolen Helen and sneaked for Troy. "The worst they can do," he told her, "is to make me a co-respondent in a divorce case." Boarding a Pullman they made themselves comfortable.

Antaeus had just been whipped by Hercules. "I suppose all there is left for me," he muttered, "is to go back to Butte." Wiping his bleeding nose, he slunk away.

Narcissus was gazing into the pool. "I'm glad it isn't the Milwaukee river," he exclaimed. "At least, while the flushing tunnel remains broken." Surveying himself proudly, he made no further comment.

Somewhat Flippant.

"But, Laura, I really can't stand it to see that fellow Muchly pay such marked attention to you." "Dear, dear, this comes of accepting a far-sighted man. I should have taken little Widgerly, who can't see four inches beyond his nose." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DID YOU EVER?

Say, were you ever awakened at 3:35 a. m. By a chorus of milk wagons and entertained by them? Have you ever heard this chorus long before the break of day, As you laid there, swearing softly, in a gentlemanly way?

Did you ever hear a rooster that would crow at 1 o'clock And wake up everybody on the whole blamed, blessed block? Did you ever long to kill him in the most emphatic style? Forgetting all your Sunday school instruction for the while?

Did you ever hear a parrot that would talk for forty years And that heeded human passion no more than jets and jeers? Did you ever cuss that parrot as you hid within your bed, And wish with all your heart that you that instant might be dead?

Did you ever know a dog that took particular delight In raising Cain around the place throughout the livelong night? Didst ever have to have a gun, that you might kill said dog And put the creature instantly in the has-been catalogue?

Did you ever listen to the screeching of a violin Or to a blaring old cornet that made you mad as sin? Were you ever forced to listen to the rattle of a car That gave your poor old tired nerves an awful j-a-r?

Did you ever have to listen to the howling of a cat Belonging to a neighbor in the bum adjoining flat? Didst ever hear a bad piano at 12 o'clock at night? Oh, very well! 'Tis plain that you are city-broke, all right!

The young woman with the soulful eyes who comes in looking for the literary editor is always laboring under a misapprehension; you can bet on that.

Mormons are to meet here to talk about polygamy. This is carrying coal to Pittsburgh with a vengeance.

Woman writes about men, women and widows. Wants to include the whole world in one article, eh?

A Kansas City boy saw the World's Fair on $2.63 a day. Look out; another millionaire after a while.

If poets could get as much advertising as some clothing salesmen there would be nothing to it.

The tobacco trust looks for aid to Roosevelt. Somebody will have to smoke up.

The baseball season is nearly over; and that is another reason to rejoice.
